

TEACHER SUES FOR $50,000.

Governess Sues Nine-Year-Old Harold Hartshorne for Jumping on Her.

SAYS HE INJURED SPINE.

Mary Bentz Says She Was Knocked Down and Terribly Abused by Her Young Pupil.

Nine-year-old Harold Hartshorne is perhaps the youngest defendant in this country who has been sued for $50,000 damages. This is the amount that Marie Bentz, the former governess of the youthful Hartshorne, wants for an alleged beating that he administered to her.

As a result of the alleged beating, Miss Bentz, asserts that she has practically been rendered useless. The defendant is the son of James M. Hartshorne, who at present lives at No. 515 Madison avenue. The Hartshornes are very wealthy and are well known socially.

According to Miss Bentz's complaint, filed by Theodore Sutro, the plaintiff was, on and before Oct. 25, 1900, employed as governess to the Hartshorne child. At that time the family lived at No. 11 East Sixty-fifth street.

Jumped On and Kicked.
On Oct. 25, 1900, Harold knocked his governess down, so the complaint alleges, beat her about the head and back, jumped upon her and kicked her.

As a result of this beating Miss Bentz says that her spine has been badly injured as well as her head; that she suffers from violent hysteria and nervous disease, and suffers from partial paralysis.

Mr. Hartshorne filed an affidavit in which he said that at the time of the alleged assault his son and the plaintiff were alone, and that all he had been able to learn from his son in regard to the trouble was that the governess had stamped the boy's face. Mr. Hartshorne said that he desired to have the plaintiff examined, so that his counsel could get the details of the circumstances of the alleged assault.

No Physical Hurt Found.
In support of his application he submitted an affidavit made by Graeme M. Hammond, a physician, who said that he had examined Miss Bentz and found that she was suffering from hysteria. He said that he did not find that she had any physical injury, and then added:

"The fright and shock which a grown woman, accustomed to the care of children, would experience from the attack of a nine-year-old boy would not, in my opinion, be sufficient to cause such hysterical manifestations as Miss Bentz exhibits."

Justice Dugro refused to vacate the order for Miss Bentz's examination, but modified it so that she can only be examined before trial as to facts of the assault itself. She will be examined in a few days.

She asserts that at certain times she cannot stand on her feet and that she suffers continuously from nervous twitching.

After the bringing of the suit young Hartshorne's father had himself appointed guardian ad litem for the boy for the purpose of the suit. Subsequently he went before a Justice of the Supreme Court and secured an order permitting him to examine Miss Bentz before trial.

Athen Henley, of No. 3060 Third avenue, was sitting on the front stoop with his baby last night when he saw his wife passing on a trolley car. He says she was with another man. He put the baby on the stoop and ran after the car with a revolver. Jumping on the car, he threatened to shoot the man and his wife, but before he could do so he was arrested by Policeman Darcy, of the Alexander avenue station.

Henley says his wife left home yesterday morning and told him to take care of the baby. He said she went to see her sister, but he claims she went to Fort George with another man. He showed the police a list with dates, and he declared these were engagements his wife had made with other men. He said he found the list in her pocket. He claimed he saw the woman with the other man on the car and he determined to shoot her.

There was great excitement on the car when Henley bounded to the foot-board brandishing a pistol. Three women fainting and the rest shrieking as the car came to a stop. All who could leaped off the car and some ran away.

The man Henley claimed was with his wife disappeared in the crowd. The woman denied she had been with any man. Henley was locked up.

HEART-HURT AND ANKLE-SPRAINED, MAY YOHE HOBBLES AFTER "PUTTY."

Hurrying Around the World in Answer to Despairing Cablegrams, the Former Lady Hope Finds Strong an Elusive Quarry.

"A STERN CHASE IS A LONG ONE."

PARIS, Aug. 4.—May Yohe is at the Hotel Meurice suffering from a sprained knee and in danger of nervous prostration. She has not seen or heard from Capt. Strong since her arrival. A physician who is in attendance says she is on the verge of losing her mind.

Miss Yohe's sprained knee was received, she says, when she fainted on receiving a note from Capt. Strong in which he threatened suicide unless she came forthwith to Paris. Her hysteria is due to the realization that she has probably come on a fool's errand.

While she was in London, she says, a letter and a telegram purporting to come from Strong were delivered to her by the French valet of Willie Hogan, Strong's cousin and a resident of Paris. He invited her to go to the Hotel Windsor to meet him.

GIRL'S PLUNGE TO STOP DOG FIGHT.

When Her Escort Refused to Jump Into the Water Miss Finn Made Leap at Cost of New Dress.

Miss Lillian Finn is the heroine of Hempstead, L. I., to-day. She sacrificed a dainty summer gown to plunge into a pond and stop a savage fight between her bull pup, Capt. Jinks, and a Newfoundland dog. Capt. Jinks was getting the better of the strange dog at that.

Miss Finn was out walking with her dog and a young man from Manhattan. Passing Lowden's Pond Capt. Jinks was pined a Newfoundland enjoying a swim and bounded in after him.

He had him by the throat in an instant and was surely drowning him. Miss Finn appealed to her escort, but he declined to wet his clothes to stop a dog fight.

Then Miss Finn plunged boldly into the water, grabbed Jinks by the head and held him under water until he released his deadly hold. Capt. Jinks was whipped and taken home. The young man from Manhattan shared Jinks's disgrace and hurriedly left for town.

THEATRICAL UNION LASTS HALF A YEAR

Letta Meredith Applies for Divorce from William A. Connolly After Only Six Months of Marriage.

After a married life of less than six months, two of which were spent in hospital, Mrs. Letta Connolly, who was the leading woman of the "Dainty Duchess and Parisian Widow's" company, to-day asked Justice Dickey in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, for alimony and counsel fees pending her divorce suit. Her husband, William A. Connolly, is a member of the team of Inman and Vincent.

Before her marriage Mrs. Connolly was known as Letta Meredith, and she says that four months after her marriage she was thrown from a carriage and had her right leg broken. While she was in the hospital she claims that her husband entertained theatrical women and others at their home, Avenue T, Homecrest.

Connolly has filed a counter suit in which he says that his marriage was illegal, as Mrs. Connolly had previously been married to Lawrence Webber and that although she had instituted divorce proceedings no decree had ever been granted.

LIVE DETECTIVE MOURNED AS DEAD.

Mrs. Amie, of Newark, Says Husband She Thought a Victim of Small-Pox Is Now a Brooklyn Sleuth.

Mrs. George Amie, of Newark, has discovered the whereabouts of her husband, who, by the records of the Board of Health, died from small-pox on Jan. 20 last, and who was said to have been buried three days later.

Mrs. Amie says she is in possession of authoritative evidence to prove that for the last three months her husband has been employed as a detective on the police force in Brooklyn. She is going to Brooklyn to-night, she says, to take her husband home with her.

Deputy Commissioner Estein had an examination made of the records of the police department and found that on the name of Amie was on the police force. He also telephoned police headquarters in Manhattan and was told that no man of that name was on the probationary list. He says that it would have been impossible for him to have become a policeman since January 20, the time he disappeared or was supposed to have died of small-pox.

Carl Reynolds, Chief of Detectives, said there was no one on his force even a secreted detective, of Amie, and that none of his men had been appointed since January 20.

TONS FELL ON STRUGGLING MAN.

Joseph Ederlin Buried by the Sudden Cave-In of Sidewalk—His Fellow-Workmen Dug Him Out.

By the sudden caving in of a sidewalk Joseph Ederlin, of Merrick road, Jamaica, was today buried for fifteen minutes beneath several tons of soil.

Ederlin was at work at the pumping station. Workmen were replacing certain pipes leading into the station, and when Ederlin walked out of the door and stepped upon the sidewalk it caved in with him. The workmen ran up to see what had happened, but could find no one.

The foreman ordered them to begin digging, and after considerable earth had been removed they found Ederlin's arm. He was dug out and removed to the Jamaica Hospital. His most serious injuries were from the pressure of earth upon his body.

IF YOU HAVE RHEUMATISM, LET THE BEES STING YOU.

Farmers of Maryland and Southern Pennsylvania Report Many Cures.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 4.—Farmers in Maryland and Southern Pennsylvania have a new fad. It is the "Bee-Sting Cure for Rheumatism." They report many remarkable cures. Their theory is based on the fact that formic acid is an active agent in the destruction of uric acid, and the farmers hold that the "medicine" in its pure state is to be had directly from the bee.

William Swively, of Shady Grove, Pa., claims the honor of the discovery. He had long been a sufferer from rheumatism and one day not long ago was set upon by a swarm of bees and terribly stung. His rheumatism disappeared at once.

Charles E. Kemp, a wealthy and retired gentleman of much learning, who resides at Roland Park, on the outskirts of Baltimore, is another living witness of the efficacy of the "Bee-Sting Treatment." Some time ago Mr. Kemp says he purchased a couple of swarms of bees in order that he might study their habits and have a hobby that would interest him.

"I was a great sufferer from rheumatism," said Mr. Kemp to-day. "Since I got the bees in my efforts to see what they were doing I have been stung many times. I do know that after I had been stung a few times my rheumatism disappeared and my joints are as supple as before I contracted the disease." And there are many others.
